Torrence Attends FFA Seminar

WASHINGTON,D.C. March 16 – Dennis W.Torrence,Agriculture Instructor at Appomattox County High School was one of more than 100 adults and young FFA leaders in Washington, D.C. recently to participate in an FFA seminar on helping the youth organization meet challenges of the '70's. The topics of discussion at the four day seminar centered around five FFA members in community development and assessing the organization to what is being made in the high school vocational agriculture education program.

Keynote speaker, Dr. John Crunkleton, teacher Education, V.P.I. & S.U.; and John W. Myers, Jr., FFA Executive Secretary, Richmond, were Virginia participants in the seminar which was attended by adult and student FFA leaders from 48 states and Puerto Rico. Seminar participants included state vocational agriculture supervisory staff representatives of the U. S. Office of Education, university agriculture teacher educators, high school vocational agriculture instructors and the state FFA Officers.

The seminar, sponsored by Lilly Endowment, Inc., of Indianapolis, Indiana as part of the Building Communities Communities Program, a major portion of the seminar was devoted to FFA and vocational agriculture involvement in the BOC community action program. Featured speakers for the program included James V. Smith Jr., Deputy U.S.D.A.'s Farmers Home Administration; Congressman John Kyl, of Iowa, Dr. Gus Waldree, President of the Irwin County, Georgia, FFA Chapter, winner of the National Chapter Award in 1971; Gus Doughty, Commissioner of Agriculture in West Virginia, and Dr. Ralph Worthington, Associate Commissioner, Vocational and Technical Education, U. S. Office of Education. Speakers stressed the importance of adapting the FFA to changes in society and in the nation's education program. They also stressed the importance of getting involved in community development to help provide leadership and make a better life for people in both rural and urban areas.

Planning for the Seminar began last November when an Ad Hoc Committee composed of state vocational agriculture supervisory personnel, teacher educators, National FFA Officers and the National FFA Organization staff first met at National FFA Organization headquarters in Alexandria, Va. to set objectives for the meeting. A second meeting in January of which Torrence and nine others participated, resulted in the following objectives being set;

1. To determine specific ways of integrating FFA into the broadened Instructional Program in Agricultural Education

2. To develop and identify ways of using performance objectives in the area of Student Personal Growth and Development.

3. To develop suggested performance objectives for the FFA degrees.

4. To increase involvement in the Building Our American Communities Program by acquainting participants with new developments in the FFA-BOAC Program.

5. To identify the benefits and develop the procedures for the effective utilization of FFA motivational and recognition programs in agricultural education.

6. To recommend to the National FFA Board of Directors specific FFA structural and programs changes necessary to keep the organization in line with the contemporary agribiness education program.

7. To determine the future course of action to be taken in FFA Operation Update.

"We think this Seminar is a significant step to getting FFA leaders and teacher educators across the nation better informed and more closely involved in setting FFA programs for the future," says H. N. Hunsicker, National FFA Advisor. "This is the first time we have ever held this kind of meeting involving both State Office of Education personnel and teacher educators. We hope it will lead to a new era of cooperation between teacher educators, the U. S. Office of Education, state supervisory staff and the National FFA Center.

Prior to the Seminar's close participants were provided a complete set of FFA program materials including award application forms for the 1972-73 school year. Participants were also involved in discussion of plans for a series of 'Update' meetings to be held across the nation this summer. The conferences will deal with implementation of FFA programs for the 1972-73 school year. Planned for the months of July, August, and September, the regional 'Update' meetings will bring plans and application forms for FFA activities to teachers, state FFA officers, teacher educators and state vocational agriculture supervisory staff not involved in last week's Washington Seminar.

Freak Storm Hits In Appomattox

A freak storm hit a part of Appomattox County last Thursday afternoon about 4 p.m. according to Mr. E. W. Mullins of Route One. The storm was described as a tornado which hit the Mullins home. Heavy winds tore off the roof of the back porch of the house and completely demolished a hay shed (pictured above) near by. The roof from the hay shed was blown approximately 200 yards away from the building. Mr. Mullins estimated damages to the hay shed at over $2500. There was extensive damage to the barn on the F. L. Murphy farm as well.
